Ben maintains a well-rounded civil litigation practice with an emphasis on complex commercial and business litigation and construction litigation. He regularly represents large institutional clients, as well as small businesses and individuals, at all levels of court in Ontario.

Ben has experience litigating complex injunctive and interlocutory proceedings, including Mareva and Norwich-type relief as well as contempt of court motions. In addition, he also represents clients in the niche area of cargo disputes, where he has acted on behalf of consignees and carriers in the road, rail and maritime contexts.

While not at work, Ben enjoys spending time with friends and family, exercising and listening to a concert at the Toronto Symphony Orchestra.
