Profile

Sabrina has experience in a variety of civil litigation areas, including professional liability, personal injury, employment and human rights, municipal liability, and subrogated claims. Sabrina has represented many professionals including veterinarians, chiropractors, home inspectors, and life insurance agents in defending against claims of professional negligence, both before regulatory bodies and in court.

In 2009, Sabrina first joined McCague Borlack LLP as a summer student; she was asked back to do her articles, and then officially joined the firm as an associate in 2011. Since that time, Sabrina has been working on matters before all levels of court, including Divisional Court and the Ontario Court of Appeal, as well as several administrative tribunals.

Due to her attention to detail, prompt response to client inquiries, and frequent case updates, Sabrina is able to provide timely legal advice aimed at moving files along in the most efficient way possible.

When not working, Sabrina enjoys practicing yoga, reading, and honing her culinary skills, especially in pastry arts and Italian cooking.
