pjacoby@mccagueborlack.com

Paul experienced a rounded civil litigation practice during his articles with MB and is well prepared to represent the firm's large institutional companies, small businesses, and individual clients. He has represented clients before the Small Claims Court and Superior Court of Justice and has assisted with matters before the Ontario Court of Appeal and the Federal Court of Canada.

Paul's experience includes matters involving corporate and commercial disputes, class actions, employment issues, family law disputes, subrogation matters, and various personal injury actions. He has also provided guidance to clients on privacy statutes. He keeps up to date on new and evolving areas of law, such as cannabis law, privacy law, and regulations around COVID-19.

Away from the office, Paul enjoys spending time with friends and family, exercising, and catching NFL games. Paul is passionate about traveling and experiencing new cultures. He is ready to communicate with clients in French and Spanish.
